During our 300-year history, we have focused on our core principles of Integrity, Friendship, Respect and Charity, and they continue to guide us today as we support our members and wider communities to build better lives together.

What is Freemasonry?

We are a unique members' organisation which has thrived for over 300 years. With no political or religious affiliations, we comprise members from all over the world seeking to expand their horizons and support their communities.

We meet in Lodges where we have ceremonial traditions that encourage us to be more tolerant and respectful, and to actively fulfil our civic and charitable responsibilities. We also make time to eat, drink and meet together, and form lifelong friendships.

Freemasonry worldwide

Each Province and District is comprised of Lodges, and it is a Lodge that you join when you become a member. There are currently over 190,000 Freemasons, belonging to more than 7,000 Lodges in the UK and 720 overseas. Membership gives you access to all of them and the fun that comes with them.

The United Grand Lodge of England (UGLE) oversees Lodges spanning London, 47 Provinces (regions across England and Wales) and 32 Districts located overseas.

UGLE is universally regarded as the Mother Grand Lodge of organised Freemasonry. In addition to our Provinces and Districts, we also recognise over 200 Grand Lodges around the world.

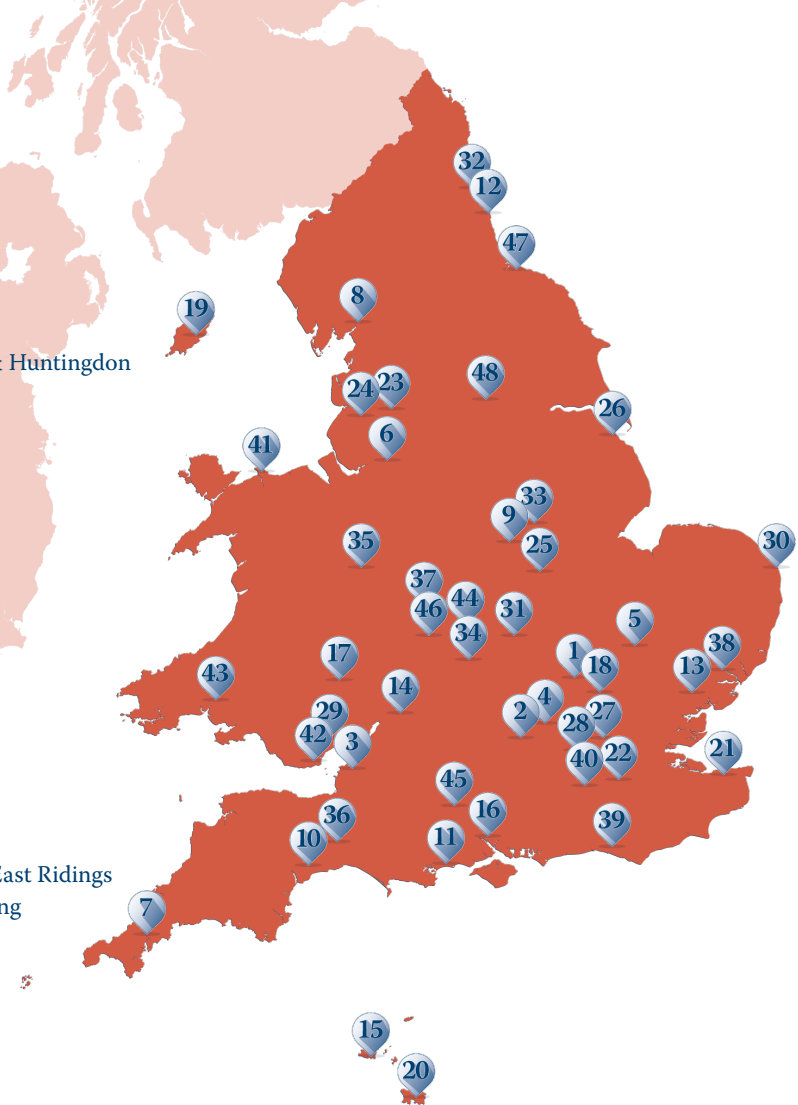

Freemasonry brings together an incredibly diverse range of individuals.

A Grand Lodge is the governing body of Freemasonry within a particular territory, where territory usually means a country or state.

Lodges meet throughout the year, with social events providing an occasion for members new and old to come together and network.

Members are encouraged to visit other Lodges under UGLE. Visiting gives members the opportunity to meet and make connections with people they would not normally have the chance to meet, knowing they share the same values.

Our headquarters in London at Freemason's Hall, welcomes more than 200,000 people from across the world every year, including members visiting for meetings and guests attending special events. It is open to the public and offers free tours of the building including a museum and café – for details visit:

Special Interest and University Scheme Lodges

From the Universities Scheme and New and Young Masons Clubs, to special interest Lodges, Freemasonry gives members many opportunities to make a wide circle of friends for life. Finding bonds with people who share common interests and meeting people from all different backgrounds are only some of the ways Freemasonry can help cultivate lasting friendships.

Helping communities

Building on timeless values, Freemasonry helps you develop yourself, make lifelong friendships and play a more active role in today's society.

UGLE provides a support structure that helps members make a positive contribution to their communities and other worthwhile causes, through fundraising events and volunteer work. The funds we raise are generated by our many members each giving small amounts.

Through grants to local and national charities, Freemasons are helping to tackle some of the most important issues facing society.

To be a force for good by providing support, care and services to Freemasons and their families in need, and supporting other charities to help the most disadvantaged in society.

Helping our members and their families

Grants are also awarded to alleviate financial strain faced by members and their families in crisis or distress.

Funded entirely through the generosity of Freemasons and their families, the aim is to build better lives by enabling opportunity, advancing healthcare and education, and promoting independence.

For more details about the Masonic Charitable Foundation (MCF) and all their work please visit: www.mcf.org.uk

On a journey based on centuries old traditions, we are encouraged to live by our core values of Integrity, Friendship, Respect and Charity in our private and public lives.

Your family and Freemasonry

Freemasonry is all about building character and supporting members as individuals. We encourage all members to be open with their family about membership and what that teaches and brings to them personally, so please share the information available to you.

Lodges organise a range of social events to which family and friends are very welcome. These can include dinners, dances, community fundraising and less formal occasions such as barbecues and live music events. Many members' partners become friends and often help organise some of the events.

Freemasonry asks that every member places the needs of his family first, his obligations to his career second, and after these his enjoyment of Freemasonry.

What are the qualifications for joining?

You must be male, at least 18 years old and have completed your secondary education; be of good character and hold a belief in a supreme being.

What will be expected of me?

Members can do as much as they wish. Participate as much as you can and ask questions. The administration, ceremonial, accounting, fundraising and general running of the Lodge is carried out voluntarily by its members.

What is the time commitment?

Each Lodge has a different schedule of meetings. Most meet between four and ten times a year. Lodges also hold social events, providing an occasion for members, their partners and families to come together.

How much will it cost?

There is a one-off joining fee and each Lodge will charge an annual subscription to cover its running costs. The membership team will discuss the options in your area with you.

Lodge meetings are normally followed by a dinner, with the cost depending on the venue. There is no requirement to attend the dinner if you are unable to, but you will likely find the socialising to be a highly enjoyable part of your experience as a Freemason.

Members are invited to donate to charity but this should always be within your means and it is entirely up to you how much you wish to contribute.

What is the dress code?

The usual dress code is a dark suit, white shirt, black shoes and black (or other suitable) tie. Some Lodges are more formal and members wear dinner suits.

What I enjoy most is being part of something meaningful, which challenges me and provides friendship and support all at the same time.

Tony - Walesby Forest Lodge

Why do we wear regalia in Lodges?

Wearing regalia is historical and symbolic and has its roots in the use of aprons by ancient operative stone masons. There are different 'aprons' depending on which level in Freemasonry the wearer is which, like a uniform, serve to indicate to members where they rank in the organisation.

Can women join?

There are two separate female-only Grand Lodges in the UK, which have about 5,000 members based here and abroad. To find out more please visit:

HFAF – Freemasonry for Women

How to join?

There are two routes. You can be recommended by someone you know who is already a member or you can fill out the online enquiry form located on the UGLE website:

www.ugle.org.uk/contact-us/interested-in-becoming-a-freemason

From there, your enquiry will be sent to the most appropriate Province or District for where you live and/or work, we will contact and introduce you to a suitable Lodge. The Lodge will give you the opportunity to ask any questions and to find out more.

I joined Freemasonry to spend more time with my father, to meet different people from outside of my own social circle and give something back to my community in the terms of charity. I joined at 37 – I should have joined when I was in my late 20s.

Paul - Lodge of Stability

What happens next?

Your journey starts with the First Degree ceremony – your Initiation into Freemasonry. Upon arrival you will be greeted by a member of the Lodge, who will assist with any questions you have and explain the process.

The First Degree ceremony reminds you that all are equal – it is the responsibility of those that do well to look after those less fortunate.

For me, Freemasonry replaced almost everything I lost when leaving the army. The values, camaraderie, teamwork, discipline, respect, a sense of belonging – and much more.
